

The Police and Crime Commissioner is researching the safety of women in public spaces and has set up a survey which is designed to get an in-depth account of people's experiences in different areas across Cheshire.

People will be able to give specific locations where they do not feel safe and they will be able to say exactly why this is the case, whether that is something to do with the area itself, the time of day, or whether they feel vulnerable because of who they are.

Although the survey is primarily aimed at the safety of women, he wants to hear from anyone and everyone who can help to improve public safety in Cheshire. When women and girls feel safer, our communities as a whole feel safer.

Through collecting people's lived experiences in this way, he is hopeful that his office will be able to put together a funding bid that will make a real difference to the feeling of safety people have in our county.

Please share your experience: <https://wh1.snapsurveys.com/s.asp?k=164630643405> – The survey will close on Thursday 31 March.
